🕊️ INTRODUCTION
This is the first and only official obituary of Deborah Joy Read, filed by sovereign right of her eldest son with Daniel Elmer Read, Chief Daniel Jacob Read IV.
It is not a death notice.
It is a sovereign proclamation — filed in flame, by lineage, and by love.
It shall remain in the record of the Kalapula Nation and Kingdom of Mythelinia as Matriarchal Proclamation No. 001

🌲 ORIGINS
Deborah Joy Read, born Deborah Travaglini, entered this world in Occidental, California — a sacred town beneath the redwoods, where her family's history was deeply rooted.
Her grandfather, Pete "Nono", ran the local gas station. Deborah worked at the hotel and the Italian restaurant nearby — not just with her hands, but with her spirit.

🏞️ THE LAND THAT HELD HER
After marrying Daniel Elmer Read, she raised ten children on 160 acres of land in Northern California — near Scotts Valley Road, Blue Lakes, and Clear Lake.
The home she lived in was provided by her loving parents, who also maintained a separate home nearby.

💒 HER FAITH
Deborah was a devoted lifelong member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.
With her husband, she served faithfully — attending temple every Friday for years.
Her faith was not symbolic. It was lived.

👨‍👩‍👧‍👦 HER FAMILY
She raised ten children. She created a home full of peace, order, faith, and radiant love.
Her legacy lives through generations.

💔 HER PASSING
Deborah passed on August 29, 2025, in Cokeville, Wyoming, surrounded by family — but not all.
Her eldest son, the Chief, was kept from her by legal and financial injustice.
Even her own letter to the judge was ignored.

📞 THE LAST CALL
Her husband placed the phone to her ear. Her son spoke. She heard him.
Her final words:
“Punish them with your massive success.”

🌿 HER BURIAL
Deborah will be laid to rest in Oaklawn Memorial Park, Corvallis, Oregon — among:
• Richard O. Read
• Bobbie Read
• Daniel Read II
• Esther Read
Her son will bury her using one of the 11 family plots he secured years before.

🔥 FINAL DECLARATION
Deborah Joy Read is not buried. She is planted.
She made ten children. She raised a nation.
And she passed with a voice that will never be silenced again.
